

TANIS SOUNDS THE ALARM WITH "LOSING MY MIND"...

Interviewer: Christophe Segard Date: 3 March 2016

Step by step Tanis is revealing her universe, and after "Ce N'est Pas Moi" (Its Not Me), the singer uses "Losing My Mind" to announce the arrival of Blackout; A universe to discover with aficia.

Last October, Tanis charmed us with "Ce N'est Pas Moi" (Its Not Me), a gentle song that offered the public the chance to discover a sensitive and well-rounded new artist. And as we approach the upcoming arrival of her album Blackout we have occasion to announce that an extract from it has just been released...

Following her declaration of love, Tanis chooses to raise awareness with "Losing My Mind", an anthem for our planet and environmental preservation brought to us by an artist that has already written and composed film scores on top of playing piano, guitar and percussion.

This commitment to the planet seems like a clear statement for a singer, born of the world... She's had the chance to travel the globe, venturing from Indonesia to Greenland and grew up across 6 different countries. This culture is very much written into her creative DNA, a world of rich color, with a mix of encounters, horizons and passions...

Whilst "Losing My Mind" rings like an alarm bell, "Our world is sick, soon the damage will be irreparable, but we can still save it; its time to act!", but by being a more energetic song than "Ce N'est Pas Moi", it provides the public with a new facet of Tanis, whilst also serving as a beautiful announcement for the arrival of Blackout, due this summer.