

Translated from: <http://www.divertir.eu/blog/culturel/tanis-le-clip-de-losing-my-mind-extrait-de-l-ep-blackout.html>

Interviewer: Maxime Lopes – Date: 3 March 2016

Tanis presents the music video for “Losing My Mind” an excerpt from upcoming EP Blackout.

After the success of her single “Ce N’est Pas Moi” (Its Not Me), Tanis released “Losing My Mind” an anthem promoting the planet and the environment. This new release will also be featured on her first EP Blackout, expected to come out early this summer. Beautiful and mysterious, at once a citizen of the world, a committed artist and a humanitarian, Tanis is a writer-composer and singer of great talent. A true musician, Tanis sings and plays piano, guitar as well as percussion, but she also writes and produces film scores. “Losing My Mind” showcases Tanis’ unique, and highly moving voice.

“Our world is ill, soon the damage we’ve done will be irreversible, but we can still save it; if we act now!”

“I’ve always been fascinated by our world. I can’t help but smile when I see the natural beauty in what surrounds me. But all of a sudden that smile vanishes, as my eyes are opened to the polluting smoke that invades our sky, to the detritus covering the streets and to the young boy starving on the corner of a crowded sidewalk. How do you process such suffering, and destruction all whilst feeling incapable of doing anything that would have a lasting effect? Alone, I simply don’t know what to do. But I’ve seen the amazing strength and power that can emerge when souls and hearts unite to make our world a better place. I wrote “Losing My Mind”, so that, in my own way, I could reach out to my listeners and make them aware of the damage that our planet and humanity are suffering from, in the hope that everyone might think of doing just that little bit more to help our world, and show a little more kindness and generosity to each other. Perhaps we can still erase the wounds of the past, repair our present and build a better future...” -Tanis

Tanis is a child of the world... having had the opportunity to travel the globe, passing from Indonesia to Greenland, growing up in 6 different countries and having learnt French, English and Chinese! As for her interest in music its no doubt thanks to an encounter with Ennio Morricone at the age of just 13 that everything fell into place. Soon after she began composing music for film scores and live theatre. Her passion and talent then saw her picked by Disney Asia to compose the score to their film Trail of the Panda.

It’s this rich diversity of culture that forms the very DNA of Tanis’ music. Her music is filled with a variety of colorful encounters and cultures... “Losing My Mind” is a lovely discovery, a gentle song that acts as a declaration of love for our planet.