

Translated from: <https://streetlyricisme.wordpress.com/2016/03/03/tanis-clippe-son-morceau-losing-my-mind/>

Street Lyricisme

Interviewer: streetlyricisme – Date: 3 March 2016

Tanis releases music video for her song “Losing My Mind”

“Our world is sick, soon the damage will be irreversible, but we can still save it if we act now!”

“Losing My Mind” is an anthem championing the planet and environment. Beautiful and mysterious, as much a citizen of the world as she is an engaging artist and humanitarian, Tanis is a writer-composer and composer of great talent. A true musician, Tanis sings, plays the piano, guitar and procession, but also writes and produces film scores.

“I’ve always been fascinated by our world. I can’t help but smile when I see the natural beauty in what surrounds me. But all of a sudden that smile vanishes, as my eyes are opened to the polluting smoke that invades our sky, to the detritus covering the streets and to the young boy starving on the corner of a crowded sidewalk. How do you process such suffering, and destruction all whilst feeling incapable of doing anything that would have a lasting effect? Alone, I simply don’t know what to do. But I’ve seen the amazing strength and power that can emerge when souls and hearts unite to make our world a better place. I wrote “Losing My Mind”, so that, in my own way, I could reach out to my listeners and make them aware of the damage that our planet and humanity are suffering from, in the hope that everyone might think of doing just that little bit more to help our world, and show a little more kindness and generosity to each other. Perhaps we can still erase the wounds of the past, repair our present and build a better future...” -Tanis

Tanis is a true child of the world... having grown up in six different countries, travelled the globe, passing from Indonesia to Greenland, and having mastered French, English and Chinese!

As for the musical side, it’s probably an early encounter with Ennio Morricone at the age of 13 that put everything into motion.

Cultural diversity is in the very DNA of Tanis’ diverse music that is filled with different encounters, different cultures and colors... a lovely discovery that opens with a sweet song, Tanis offers us a beautiful declaration of love for our planet with “Losing My Mind”.