TANIS: L'ÉCOLOGIE MUSICALE

Interviewer: Marla Jones Date: 7 March 2016

Whilst awaiting her first EP “Blackout”, discover “Losing My Mind”, the latest release from Tanis.

Tanis is very much a citizen of the world. The young artist has grown up in six different countries, speaks French, English and Chinese and embodies the richest aspects of each culture as well as holding the planet close to her heart.

In everyone’s life there are notable encounters, the most decisive of which for Tanis was when she met Ennio Morricone when she was 13yrs old. Everything changed that day, and boosted by her passion, the young girl gave herself body and soul to music, composing film scores, and orchestrating live theatre. Since then she has worked with Disney Asia on Trail of the Panda. Writer-composer Tanis plays piano, guitar, percussion and sings.

Preparing for the release of her first EP Blackout (Warner), Tanis has released the music video for Losing my Mind, a committed and green song that sets the record straight on the precariousness of our environment.

“I’ve always been fascinated by our planet. I can’t help but smile at the natural beauty that surrounds us. But all of a sudden my smile fades, for my eyes have been opened to the polluting smoke that invades our sky, they see the detritus that litters the streets and the young boy starving on the corner of an overcrowded sidewalk.”-Tanis

Behind this tragic testimony hides a profound desire to unite humanity under one banner. Tanis sings of a grim fate and hopes to move as many people as possible into action. It’s clear that in Tanis the Earth has found itself a marvellous ambassador.
